Stonybrook Elementary School — Additions and Renovations

Springettsbury Township, Pennsylvania

Stony Brook Elementary School is a 50,000 SF existing facility built in the 1960's. For this project, the entire facility is rearranged programmatically and renovated, and approximately 30,000 SF is added – a significant accomplishment given the challenging zoning setback issues faced. Some main goals of the project include maintaining an existing community play area and reusing existing portions of the building in new ways. Additionally, the educational design focuses on the “school within a school” concept and places a media center at the core. The facility design utilizes sustainable design techniques and materials; however, the School District elected not to pursue LEED certification.
